HOW IS IT MEASURED

Sudden soft tissue injuries are a costly problem for the military. To prevent and treat injuries, the military relies on various measures to track and monitor the incidence of injuries. This includes the use of electronic health records, which are systematically and accurately tracked by military health facilities. In addition, military hospitals maintain detailed records of injuries and the treatments provided for them. This information is then used to determine the effectiveness of preventive measures and to identify areas for improvement.

REFERENCES